

Darbys dedicated Employment Law training team is on hand to equip you and your management team to traverse the minefield of employment law and HR practice.

Why is training so important?

In the light of rapidly changing UK and European employment law, HR professionals and managers are finding it increasingly difficult to deal with workplace issues confidently and effectively.

With our help you can

- ensure your organisation is complying with current legal requirements and applying best HR practice.
- empower management to deal with staff fairly and within legal and company guidelines.
- enhance the overall performance of your organisation.
- improve the morale of your staff.
- avoid expensive and lengthy tribunal claims.

Our approach

- clear presentation of the law without legal jargon.
- workshop style with interaction and group discussion.
- real case examples.
- case studies and problem solving - working through practical examples together.

What other people have said about us...

“What an excellent course. I’ve got lots to think about now but it is all so much clearer!”

“Informative, concise and easy to comprehend – not having a background within HR.”

“Great structure, well presented, interactive and an appropriate level of detail.”

Our dedicated Employment Law trainers are Sue Jackson and Victoria Marcham.

Sue Jackson

Sue has worked as an in-house lawyer for Nestlé and written a number of employment law training courses for Citizens Advice, including 27 on-line interactive courses. In 2008, she completed a Masters in Law with a particular focus on gender equality and equal pay.

Email: sjackson@darbys.co.uk

Telephone: 01865 811244

Victoria Marcham

After graduating from Oxford University and completing her legal training, Victoria joined Darbys in 2006 and qualified as a solicitor in employment law in September 2008.

Email: vmarcham@darbys.co.uk

Telephone: 01865 811236

“I really enjoyed the seminar and would like to come to another one. It was just the right length which meant I hadn’t taken too much time away from the office.”

“Very well run course and so welcoming, putting one at ease.”

“Really liked the straightforward, non-threatening style.”